AAA-ICDR® Launches Online Caseload Tracker, Strengthening Transparency & Breaking New Ground in ADR Industry

NEW YORK, N.Y.—March 25, 2019—The American Arbitration Association®-International Centre for Dispute Resolution® (AAA-ICDR), the largest alternative dispute resolution institution, has introduced a ticker on its homepage (<https://www.adr.org/>) tracking and regularly updating the amount of resolved cases it has facilitated.

The AAA-ICDR is the first provider of arbitration and mediation services to publicly disclose caseload data in this fashion. As of March 18, 2019, the AAA-ICDR has resolved 65,958 cases this year alone, and helped 5,686,389 cases to reach conclusion since the organization's establishment in 1926.

"We are proud of the scope, size, and range of ADR cases around the world that we are uniquely positioned to administer," said India Johnson, President and CEO of the AAA-ICDR. "It is important for organizations and for individuals to be able to resolve their disputes fairly and efficiently and move on with their lives."

The AAA-ICDR offers access to a variety of experienced and respected independent arbitrators and mediators for parties in more than 90 countries. The organization's international presence and broad array of scalable resources allow it to resolve disputes quickly and cost-effectively for many different commercial entities, including large multinational corporations. The AAA-ICDR continues to add diverse legal and business experts to its roster of arbitrators and mediators through its ongoing diversity initiatives.
