AAA Mediation.orgSM Executive Receives ABA Section of Dispute Resolution Award

Harold Coleman, Jr., American Arbitration Association® Senior Executive who has Mediated and Arbitrated Hundreds of Disputes over Three Decades, Recognized by the American Bar Association Section of Dispute Resolution

NEW YORK, N.Y.—April 6, 2018—Harold Coleman, Jr., Senior Vice President for Mediation at the American Arbitration Association (AAA®), who has mediated and arbitrated hundreds of disputes over his 30-year career, received the American Bar Association (ABA) Section of Dispute Resolution Chair's Award. Mr. Coleman received the award on April 5, 2018 during the ABA 20th Annual Section of Dispute Resolution Spring Conference in Washington, D.C.

Mr. Coleman serves as the Executive Director and Mediator for AAA Mediation.org, a resource that provides individuals and companies seeking qualified mediators with a searchable database of mediators. For more information on AAA Mediation.org, please visit www.aaamediation.org.

Prior to joining AAA Mediation.org, Mr. Coleman was a civil litigation attorney and project design engineer. He has served the international business and legal communities in resolving complex litigated and non-litigated disputes since 1987, with an expertise in complex technical litigation.

"I have devoted a lengthy career looking for innovative ways to resolve conflicts between parties of all types, whether everyday people or large corporations, and am honored to be recognized by the ABA for that work," said Mr. Coleman. "In my role as head of AAA Mediation.org, I hope to continue striving to act in the public interest to train aspiring and practicing mediators, to provide genuine thought leadership, and help people resolve disputes and reconcile relationships ethically, efficiently, and cooperatively."
